IN JAIL WITH HER BABY

Pressing the Little One to Her Breast, She Tearfully Tells How She Came to Be Accused by the

we put me in jail. It's a hard lot a woman with two Little children. Sitting in the woman's department of the Raymond Street Jail, Brooklyn, with her eight months old baby clasped to her breest, Mrs. Bessle Skelly, a good looking young woman of twentyeven, talked to an Evening World reporter to-day of the alleged or me which has taken her from her pretty apartments, No. 788 Classon avenue, Brooklyn, and placed her in prison.

Yesterday the young woman was ar-algred in a Flatbush Court, Brooklyn, the charge of having set fire to her apartments. Twice on Monday evening an attempt was made to burn up the se. Oil-soaked clothing was found in different places in the Skelly apartment "I never tried to set fire to my house. woman went on. "But it certainly looks as though some one had intention ally caused the fire. The police suspect me because I have 500 insurance, but I never did it Found House in Flames.

"Monday I went out with the two children, May, who is eight months and who is four years old, and when I came back home I went upstairs and found that there was a fire in my room. It had started in a dress-suit case in the parlor, but I don't know how it started. I went back down stairs to see the bables because I didn't want to leave them alone. I thought I would tell some one then about the fire." "Mrs. Gilfoyle, who lives on the floo and said "There is a fire in your rooms why don't you tell some one?" "Of course I can't deny that there was kerosene in my house. I used it on the bedding for exterminating purposes and I cleaned the furntture with it. In the corner of my closet there was a big lot of rags with kerosene on them that I had used in cleaning my woodwork. It is a shame to arrest me for the the fail, for though she has been away from home since Monday night he has not visited her.

"He was out of town, but I know he will come to me to-day. We have been married five years and this is the first trouble we have ever had. It is terrible to be accused of such a crime when you are innocent."

James Skelly, the husband, appeared at the Childrens' Society to-day and took the boy to a friends house. He said he could not believe the charges against his wife.

JAIL RATHER THAN GIVE UP THE DOG

Mrs. Sarah Cohen Remonstrates with Tears When the Court Orders Pet Returned to Its Owner.

Topsy did not appear as a winness to testify in dog language as to which of her claimants was her real witness. And when Joe Bollar held up Topsy's mother in his arms and offered her as a witness, Justice Roesch ruled that her tes-timony was incompetent on the question of whether Topsy was identical with the the puppy which Herman Waller gave to his sister, Mrs. Sarah Cohen, of No. 198 Second street. But the east side Solon said he would take her testimony as evidence that her daughter Topsy, image of herself, was a gray French itizens and a parrot, which swears like a trooper, are sitting up o' nights in water with an eye out for a gang of burglars who have been robbing houses right and left for many weeks past.

Edgewater Bird Sits Up at Night with an Eve Out for a Band of Bold, Bad Bur-

One gets to Edgewater on the Fort Lee ferry from the foot of One Hundred and Thirtieth street, but not until recently have the Manhattan burglars, whose scalps are being sought on the other side of the Hudson, crossed the did not know until last night, however, that they had overlooked a most waluable aid in Joseph Weaver's parrot Johnny.

Before Mr. and Mrs. Weaver retired they locked every door and saw that each window fastening was in its place. As the mistress of the house started upstairs her last word was, "Johnny, look out for burglars,"

"Bet I will," said Johnny.

All was quiet in the house and it o'clock had just struck when Mrs. Weaver nudged her husband.

"Joseph," she whispered, "what as that?"

Mr. Weaver rubbed his eyes, and from below stairs sounded Johnny's voice.

"D— it it's cold. Col-i-i-d. Come down and close the win-dow!"

Mr. Weaver said he was sure that all the windows had been locked.

"Well, /I think you had better go down any way and see—"

"D— it, are you going to let me freeze? It's col-i-i-d." chattered Johnny.

"Jos Weaver, go down and see what's the matter with that parrot," and Airs. Weaver snuggled the clothes closer around her, and the head of the house started downstairs, taking a revolver.

"Bout time," was the greeting Johnny gave him, and Mr. Weaver was sturted downstairs, taking a revolver.

"Bout time," was the greeting Johnny gave him, and Mr. Weaver was struck by a cold blast which blew in thrush an open window. A glance showed him a knife that a burgler had dropped, after pushing the class out of place. The intruder had gone Grabbing an overooat from the rack in the hall. Weaver ran out of the house and down the hill. He forgot to close the wiedow in his haste, and for a hundred feet and more Johnny's voice deaft out some talk the like of which had never been heard in Edgewater before, and that would cause instant expulsion from Zion City.

Weaver reached the ferry just as the midnight boat was pulling out and re-
